WHEELING INDUSTRIES. The Belmont Mill. By our Old Employe.

We have already noted the withdrawal of E. M. Norton and others from the Virginia Mill organization early in the year 1849. The success attending the opera-tions of that mill during the time of their connection with it had more fully developed the natural advantages of Wheeling ss a manufacturing point and had attracted the attention of practical men elsewhere who were desirous of securing for themselves more immediate and higher results from their small capital and skilled labor than seemed possible under the shadow of the wealth which controlled the iron interests of the great manufacturing centers of the country. Mr. Norton and his associates therefore had no difficulty in drawing a number of the best class of workmen from other cities to the support of their new enter-A company was soon formed consisting of William Bailey, S. H. Woodward, Henry Wallace, C. B. Doty, Holtuted a corps of experienced, practical and intelligent class of citizens. iron workers. From the late Joseph Caldwell they purchased two acres of ther enlarged when its magnificent for land lying on the bank of the river in pace, of which we have already made what is now known as Center Wheeling particular note, shall have been put in but which at that time, although em braced in the city limits; was only a corn April of the present year. Just fter the works were completed Henry Moore, of this city was admitted to the partnership, and the company represented capital of forty thousand dollars. a capital of forty thousand dollars.

Active operations were commenced in October 1849 with E. M. Norton as President and William Bailey as manDictor, of this city. ager of the mill, under the title of Norton Bailey & Co. Just about this time a radical change was effected in the method of is called, by the introduction of the Burden Squeezer. Previous to the invention of this machine the preperation of the bloom for the rolls was effected by means of a tilt hammer, under which the bloom was brought to such shape as admitted its passage through the rolls, after this it was reheated and drawn into nail plate. The introduction of the steam hammer, which was used in the Virginia Mill was considered a long stride in advance towards perfection and economy of manipulation. In the preparation of the bloom for the hammer the raw pig metal was not brough up to that intense hest which now characterizes the operation of boiling or puddling, consequently the true conditions of the iron when brought to the hammer could not be so accurately determined and there was an unavoidable irregularity in the quality of the plate manufactured the quality of the plate manufactured of the conditions of the plate manufactured of the plate manufact and manifest advantages followed the inboiling of the iron by which a much larger percentage of impurities were driven off, the more perfect elimination of cinder by the squeezing process and the introduction of muck bar, by the cutting, cross piling and reheating of which have been secured that uniformity in quality of iron which had hitherto been impossible, but which was so desirable a qual in nail plate. A very marked improvement was also made in the method of rolling nail plate by the introduction of what are called Bull-head rolls Formerly the plate had been drawn out on sheet rolls, just as sheet iron is still made. The plate was then cut into strips with but, ordinarily, very little regard to the grain of the iron. While this plan may have made no very preceptible difference in the appearance of the nails, it made a very material difference in the quality. BUY THE Under the improved rolls the iron can out in long narrow strips, but of a unim width of ten or twelve inches, and thus when sheared up secured absolute uniformity in the grain of the nails. These great improvements were quickly adopted by the Belmont Company, and their dist use in this city was in their Grand Masquerade Ball mill. The Virginia Mill having fallen into unskilled management, the Belmont immediately took precedence, and entered upon that career of success which has attended its operations ever since. It continued under its first management until November, 1851, something over Monday Night, Feb. 9, 1874. until November, 1851, something over two years, at which time in, the parlance of the mills, there was a swarm, and Messrs. Bailey, Woodward and others retired from the Company, Henry Moore becoming the purchaser of the retiring came a member of the Company, and the title became Norton, Acheson & Co. In 1853 Joseph Bell became a stockholder, and was added to the active membership From year to year the business continued to increase with uninterrupted prosperity; so that in the year 1860 its productive capacity had been brought up to eighty ma-chines, or more than four times the original number. After the commencement of the civil war, when trade had become stimulated in the highest degree and all manufactured products had reached fabulous prices,

In the year 1863 the partnership arrangement of the Company expired by limitation, and the mill property was sold at public auction for one hundred and at public auction for one hundred and twenty-seven thousand dollars. Henry McCullough, of Pittsburgh, becoming the purchaser. The Company was re-organized under the title of McCullough, Acheson & Co. M. B. Cox also at this time became a member of the Company. In the fall of 1865 the title was again changed to the Belmont Nail Works Company under which, operations have continued to the present time. During these changes J. C. Acheson, Joseph Bell and others retired from the Company. Since its organization as the Belmont Nail Works Company it has largely added to its productive capacity, having increased the number of its machines to one hundred and ten, the largest number operated in this city, and the third largest in the United States. It has been, since its last organization nder the efficient management of the Vice President of the Company, Joseph D. Du Boise. We find its production for the years 1871-2-3 to have been as follows For 1871, 194,359 kegs; for 1872, 168,000 kegs; for 1873, 179,705 kegs, being a total for three years of 542,064 kegs, being t yearly average of 180,688 kegs, or an av erage per week of 8,588 } kegs. A prope allowance for strikes and other stops will bring the weekly average to something over 5,000 kegs.

The territorial domain of the Company now comprises about four acres, and its buildings occupy in length two full squares. Extensive additions have been made to its coal privileges, although there is yet of its original coal field eno to last about eighteen years. Under its ston Harden, F. D.
